

SUBSIDIZED CHILD CARE HANDOUT

Alameda County

(State budget cuts may result in reductions to the funding for child care programs.
The information on programs in this handout is subject to change.)

Need help paying for child care? If you do, you're looking for "subsidized" child care. This handout will assist you in your search. There are a variety of child care programs in Alameda County to help low-income parents. It's important for you to start early to find a subsidized program for your child because there are more families who need help than there is money.

Who funds subsidized child care? The California Department of Education (CDE) administers most of the child care funds in California – state as well as federal. Some local governments, corporations and foundations also provide funds to serve children from low-income families.

What types of programs are available?

Center-based Care – General child care and development programs are state and federally funded programs that use centers and family child care home networks operated or administered by either public or private agencies and local educational agencies. These agencies provide child development services for children from birth through 12 years of age and older children with exceptional needs. There are very few child care centers that serve infants, however. Most serve children beginning at age three. These programs generally offer full day, full year care.

State Preschool - Part-day comprehensive developmental programs for three to five-year-old children from low-income families.

Pre-Kindergarten Family Literacy Programs - These programs usually operate part of the year and are designed to help a child's transition to kindergarten. They provide developmentally appropriate activities the year before children are eligible to be enrolled in kindergarten.

Alternative Payment (AP) Programs (also known as Vendor Programs) – These programs do not provide the actual child care. Instead, they pay for the child care of eligible families in licensed family child care homes, centers or exempt child care situations. The parent chooses the child care program. Then the alternative payment program signs a contract with the parent and provider and pays the provider directly. AP programs serve specific geographic areas.

Who operates subsidized programs? Programs are run by a wide variety of institutions – nonprofit, for-profit organizations, churches, school districts, local governments, etc.

How can I get my child into a subsidized program?

CalWORKs (Welfare to Work) Programs: These programs serve parents receiving cash aid (welfare). Parents who have worked their way off cash aid but are still low-income are also eligible. They are funded by both the state and federal government. New welfare recipients go through a CalWORKs orientation. During the first few months after they attend this orientation, the child care (chosen by the parent) is paid for by an Alameda County Stage 1 alternative payment (AP) program. Once the CalWORKs parents are working or in a stable job-training situation, they are transferred to a Stage 2 AP program. Parents remain in Stage 2 until two years after their income makes them ineligible for cash aid. At that point they are transferred to a Stage 3 program. This is a closed process and only parents on welfare can enter any of these programs.

Non-CalWORKs Programs: Parents not enrolled in CalWORKs need to sign up on an eligibility list. Alameda County's Centralized Eligibility List (CEL) is administered by BANANAS. Getting on the CEL puts you on the ONE list that all the CDE subsidized programs in the County use when they fill openings in their programs (see page 3 for a list of CEL participating programs).

In order to get on the CEL, your family income must be below a certain level set by CDE. See the chart below to determine whether you are eligible.

Schedule of Income Ceilings for Child Care and Development Programs *

Family Size	Gross Monthly Income	Yearly Income
1 – 2	$3,474	$41,688
3	$3,722	$44,644
4	$4,135	$49,620
5	$4,797	$57,564
6	$5,459	$65,508
7	$5,583	$66,996
8	$5,707	$68,484
9	$5,831	$79,972
10	$5,955	$71,460
11	$6,079	$72,948
12	$6,203	$74,436

*Income guidelines are subject to change.

Note: The following is a partial list of income types that will count toward your total household income:

Wages/salaries	Self-employment income
Child support, spousal support	Worker's compensation
Disability insurance payments	Unemployment
Pensions or annuities	Veteran's benefits
Cash Aid (TANF or CalWORKs)

For most state/federally funded programs parents must be working, looking for work, going to school, in training, or medically incapacitated.

You can enroll your child on the CEL in person or by telephone by contacting any of the agencies in this handout whose phone numbers are listed. You can also apply on-line through the CEL website at www.alamedacocel.org

How are families chosen?

Since the CEL is a county-wide eligibility list, any subsidized agency in the county could contact you and offer you child care if you meet the requirements of the program. It's very important to notify the CEL if your family income drops because that will move you closer to the top of the eligibility list. Also report any changes in your address or phone number to the program that enrolled you on the CEL. Otherwise, the program may not be able to contact you when there is an opening. Once you get on the CEL, you will receive periodic update letters and you MUST return these letters to remain active on the CEL.

State/federally-funded programs give first priority to families who receive Child Protective Services (CPS). Next, these programs enroll the lowest-income families. Some state-funded programs only serve certain families, such as campus centers for student families, or programs for teenage parents enrolled in high school. The length of time you are on the eligibility list does not make a difference. What counts is the level of your family income. Proof of income is required before a family is enrolled in a program.

What if the services offered by a program don't meet my family's needs? If you are offered child care that doesn't meet your needs, you do not have to enroll. Your family record will remain on the CEL so that other programs can contact you when they have openings.

By staying on the CEL, will my child eventually get into a program? Unfortunately, there is no guarantee that you will receive assistance through a subsidized child care program. Limited funds are available for subsidized child care. If your family income was relatively high when you got on the CEL, you may never reach the top of the list. Even if your income is low, other families with lower incomes who get on the list after you do will be served first.

Remember, the CEL is NOT a waiting list. The amount of time that a family has been waiting does not determine who will be served. The CEL is an eligibility list. Families get enrolled based on income. Child care subsidies are offered when funding becomes available or when there is an opening in a subsidized child care program.

If your information changes, it is not necessary to fill out another application. However, please call the agency that originally enrolled you on the CEL to update any changes to your information (family size, income, address, telephone number, etc.).

Are these programs free? They are for some families. For other parents whose income has reached a certain level, fees are charged on a sliding scale. These fees are, in most cases, much less than the cost of private child care. All state/federally-funded programs use the same fee schedule.

What if I have problems after my child is enrolled in subsidized care? Parents in subsidized programs have the right to appeal any official decision which adversely affects them. You will learn about this adverse decision through a Notice of Action (NOA) issued by the program. If you receive such a NOA, you should immediately read the appeal process on the back of the NOA form and follow the directions for appealing including meeting the specified due dates for action. You should first appeal by completing Step 1 on the NOA and giving it to the program's director. If the action isn't changed in your favor at the agency level, you would then appeal to CDD.

If you simply leave a program over a dispute, you will lose your subsidy and must go back on the CEL to get into another subsidized program. For this reason, it is best to try to reach an acceptable solution rather than withdrawing your child. Ask for a transfer to a different classroom if that's possible. If the program operates several centers, you may be able to transfer your child to another site.

Parents enrolled in alternative payment (AP) programs have the right to change providers if they are dissatisfied with their first choice. Contact the AP program paying for child care to find out the process for changing providers. (If you have a problem after your child is enrolled in subsidized care, you can contact CDE at (916) 322-6233.)

Are there any other subsidized options? Yes, there are some training programs which will pay for child care while you are being trained and some city-funded programs which provide a partial subsidy. Call your local resource and referral agency for information. See listing below.

Alameda County Head Start Programs

The rules for these types of programs are different from other programs serving low-income families. Head Start programs receive federal funding and therefore are not required to be on the CEL. Except for Berkeley/Albany Head Start, you should contact the other Head Start programs for eligibility information. Most of these programs offer part-day sessions and operate only during the public school year. They are either free or low-cost and parent participation is usually required.
